

Kenneth Croston

I am the Diocesan governor from St Thomas' church. I was appointed as a school governor about seven years ago during my time as church warden, a post I occupied for twelve years from 1998 to 2011 which entailed maintaining the wellbeing of the building and congregation and I am still a deputy warden. First attending St Thomas' in the early eighties when my children attended this school, it has been a large part of my life ever since. I am also playing a small part in the church's 250 anniversary celebrations this year. Retiring early from a career on the railways in 2005, I still have an interest in that form of transport and have a model railway. I like travelling and, along with my wife, attending to our garden. I feel honoured to be part of this school and serve as your Health and Safety Governor.
